A WOMAN OF FASHION. THE DEBTS OF A FASHI NABLE WOMAN The Paris correspondent of the Boston Traveller, in his last letter to that paper, gives an account of a remarkable case of female prodi-

following: "You are to know that Madame dowas one of the finest ladies of fine society .-She went everywhere. She went to the "balls of only five hundred" given at the Tuilleries-she even went to the first performance of Halevy's La Magicienne-she even beard Tamberlick the first night he gave his vt de poitrine. Well, Madame de --- has "succumbed;" but she went down with a grace: that woman could do nothing without an exquisite grace! with debts which were debts; not the paltry insignificant ha'-penny bills to butchers, bakers, and such common folks, al -lons-donc! A hundred and twenty thousand dollars is the bill; an' please, sir! dollars, not france; an' please, sir! The busband must have made a wry face when he heard that his wife actually owed a at sum of money as romantically beyond even June 12th, 1858.

the poetry of pin money as Aladdin's lamp 78 Number and Fortunatus' purse are beyond de Rothschild's fortune. What a pity it is the Warden at Charleston could not introduce such a punishment into his penitentiary house as | 1 this woman suffered before she contessed bow far she bad gone astray! If he could doom his hardened criminals to that oppression of the heart, that fever of the brain, burthened with a secret which must be disclosed, and whose pupishment she could not foresee, pressing day after day, receiving night after night the caresses of those lips soon to utter such angry words and bitter reproaches-the fatal secret quivering on her tongue, and still postponed for the day's idle prattle! Look you! The ancients pierced Prometheus' character badly; they should have given him no ravenous vulture, but an upbraiding con- 2 prizes of science, and they would have condemned him | 2 prizes of to the supremest torture in the arsenal of 2 prizes of

Mm. de --- was at the fancy ball given by M. Walewski, and all the newspapers rang | Certificates of packag's 25 whole tickets $140 00 with her praises, she was so gay, so careless, so full of repartee and so much en train .-So the world judges, ever taking the mask for the heart! She did not go that ball for pleasure; she went there on business. "I have set my life upon a dice." She went there determined to single out the Emperor from among all the masks; to confide to him her desperate condition; to crave his aid!---Judge from this resolve how high the fever raged which consumed her brain! She saw a mask; knew it was the Emperor; coquettishly enticed him in a corner, and told him the story of her wretchedness, without omitting 1 a single pang. The mask heard her story, and treating it as a farce of masquerade, gaily referred her to the Arabian tales, as even M. de Rothschild himself could no afford her relief. She almost forgot berself so far as to scream with agony. The voice of the masker showed her 'twas not the Emperor! It was then too late to see the Emperor, and she resolved to tell her busband. The first burst of the conjugal storm was of tropical violence. But as the husband loved his wife with ardent affection, and pitied her for the long nights of anguish she lay tossing in fever, while he slept in her bosom, he somewhat relented, and is now paying her debts. I dare say, when he has liquidated them all, he will recall her from the convent whither she has retired. It seems that in her love for show, she became $16,000 in debt to the dry goods shops, the jewellers and the mantua makers-that she became alarmed at this sum, and embarked in stock gambling to save herself. Loss followed loss, until she found herself owing $120,000."

Some of our readers may remember "Ella Wentworth's Journal," for that was the name of an interesting literary publication which was promised; and a few may recollect having foolishly paid their subscription money in advance, receiving as the sole consideration therefor a neatly printed receipt .--But our citizens generally were not sufficiently gullible to be taken in after that fashion. In Philadelphia, Cincinnati and other places Mr. W. was more successful, and, by all accounts, must have reaped quite a barvest .-The latest news respecting this newspaper confidence man, is, that he has taken flight from San Francisco and is on the wing for Australia. At San Francisco, his female companion was known as Mrs. Cora Anna Weekes, and Wentworth as Mr. Weekes .--The same system was pursued there as in other places, and, it is said, the lady found quite a rich placer in the land of gold and worked the mine extensively. From Australia, in due course of time, he may doubtless be expected to return to the Atlantic States to renew his operations. How this man has escaped the penitentiary so far, is a mystery, unless it is accounted for by the tent protection of the petticoat, his system of swindling being carried on through the medium of his female companion.

Benificence is the most exquisite luxury; and the good man, after all, is the genuine Everybody should have his head, his heart, and his hand educated.

Why is petticoat government stronger now than formerly? Because it is brass hooped.
